School social worker: You've been assigned to provide Term 1 services to a third-grader in the school

Father recently lost his job, Term 2 benefits plus income from mother's part-time job is insufficient to meet the family of five's needs.

What you find is that the entire Term 3 in which your clients live has been hit hard by the recent economic recession.

Low-Term 4 housing is a top priority for the city ...

While working on this case, you learn on the news that the state is having a Term 5 problem and will be cutting basic funding that supports local transportation, Term 6 care, and job development for Term 7-income families.

The target of most of the cuts is low-Term 8 and Term 9 people within the state.

You know from the daily news that the national economy is struggling to recover from a severe recession resulting in reorganization and redistribution of federal resources that will reduce support to the states in providing services to low- Term 10 and working poor families.

Social workers involved in policy development - an example of social work Term 11 practice - are needed to address basic issues of employment that affect the country all the way down to the community, family and Term 12 level, as demonstrated by the child with whom you're working in your school.
